BROOME COUNTY, N.Y. -- A local congressman is on the road encouraging high school students to consider the military academies as a possible destination after graduation.

Representative Richard Hanna toured schools across the 24th Congressional district this week, talking to students who are specifically interested in joining the military. Hanna promoted the academies as a great way to get your college education free of charge.

Watch the full story at YNN.com