CAZENOVIA, N.Y. -- On Friday morning, Hanna visited Cazenovia High School to speak to a class. He talked about perks of being a congressman - like all the free food, if you know where to find the right buffets - and the recent debate over the Fiscal Cliff.

He also asked the students a few question on the topic of gun control and violence in schools. Hanna brought up the shooting this week at a high school in California that left one student wounded.

The students told Hanna they're more concerned about mental health surrounding gun access. That's a concern their representative shares too.

WRVO spoke with Hanna following his school visit on gun control and other issues. Click here to hear the whole story.